POSITION DESCRIPTION

The School of Continuing Studies is seeking experienced and credentialed subject matter experts (SMEs) to take on the roles of Course Developers and/or Instructors for its new eight-course Post Graduate Certificate in Digital Construction Management, launching in Fall 2025.

Course Developers will be responsible for developing course content and typically teach the first offering of the course. They will collaborate with a team of experts under the direction of the Program Manager. The translation of expertise into tangible content will be facilitated by our instructional design team. Course Developers are not expected to create assets or content independently but will provide the necessary information, proposed order, and formatting to streamline the presentation and flow of subject matter.

Instructors will teach the courses, ensuring that students receive high-quality education and practical knowledge. The program is a full-time, non-credit Certificate comprised of eight courses and will take eight to nine months to complete. Students will advance through the program as a single cohort throughout the eight courses.
